NO. J16-04319 / ID. 1684730

Course Period in Japan: From September 18th, 2016 to 29th October, 2016

This information pertains to one of the JICA Knowledge Co-Creation Program (Group & Region Focus) of the Japan International Cooperation Agency (JICA), which shall be implemented as part of the Official Development Assistance of the Government of Japan based on bilateral agreement between both Governments.

‘JICA Knowledge Co-Creation (KCC) Program’ as a New Start

In the Development Cooperation Charter which is released from the Japanese Cabinet on February 2015, it is clearly pointed out that “In its development cooperation, Japan has maintained the spirit of jointly creating things that suit partner countries while respecting ownership, intentions and intrinsic characteristics of the country concerned based on a field-oriented approach through dialogue and collaboration. It has also maintained the approach of building reciprocal relationships with developing countries in which both sides learn from each other and grow and develop together.” We believe that this ‘Knowledge Co-Creation Program’ will serve as a center of mutual learning process.

I. Concept

Background

Many of the world's forests and woodlands are still not managed sustainably. Some countries do not have practicable forest policies, legal and institutional frameworks, incentives and technologies to promote sustainable forest management. Accordingly, there are countries where cannot utilizes enough economic potentials of forest resources for regional economy. The international forest certification mechanisms to utilize Criteria and Indicators (C&I) for national/regional level as well as for management level is paid attention as a one of practical approach in order to promote sustainable forest management.

Hokkaido, where the participants of this program will visit, has huge forest areas (5.5 million hectares) which account for 22% of Japan's total forest area, In the past, Hokkaido produced a large volume of timber from natural forests, but in recent years, over 80% of total timber volume is produced from plantation forests which were established during last 50 years. In addition, globalization of timber market strongly affected to forestry in Hokkaido such as decline of domestic timber price, increase unemployment of foresters, weaken local economy where depended on income from forestry and so on. As such, local government and residents have been pursuing strategic utilization of forest resources for revitalizing local economies and maintaining local employment through various effort such as introduction of forest certification and branding of local materials.

Shimokawa-town is one of the most famous model in Japan, who obtained forest certification by Forest Stewardship Council (FSC) in 2003 and was selected as "Future City Initiative" in 2011 and as a "Biomass Industrial City" in 2013 by the national government. She is a pioneer to achieve regional development thorough utilizing forest resources prudentially and promotion of sustainable forest management.

The participants of this program will enjoy various experience and efforts of Hokkaido and get valuable implications to promote sustainable forest management in respective countries.

For what?

This program is to enhance the capacity for regional development by promoting effective use of forest resources through various approaches such as Forest Certification and product branding.

For whom?

This program is offered to officers working with central government, local governments and public organizations who have work experience of five years or more in the areas of forest management and/or wood/non-wood forest products.

How?

Participants will have opportunities to take part in lectures and field visits relevant to the subject. Participants will make an action plan with knowledge and ideas equipped in the program for promotion of sustainable forest management.

For Your Reference

JICA and Capacity Development

The key concept underpinning JICA operations since its establishment in 1974 has been the conviction that “capacity development” is central to the socioeconomic development of any country, regardless of the specific operational scheme one may be undertaking, i.e. expert assignments, development projects, development study projects, training programs, JOCV programs, etc.

Within this wide range of programs, Training Programs have long occupied an important place in JICA operations. Conducted in Japan, they provide partner countries with opportunities to acquire practical knowledge accumulated in Japanese society. Participants dispatched by partner countries might find useful knowledge and re-create their own knowledge for enhancement of their own capacity or that of the organization and society to which they belong.

About 460 pre-organized programs cover a wide range of professional fields, ranging from education, health, infrastructure, energy, trade and finance, to agriculture, rural development, gender mainstreaming, and environmental protection. A variety of programs are being customized to address the specific needs of different target organizations, such as policy-making organizations, service provision organizations, as well as research and academic institutions. Some programs are organized to target a certain group of countries with similar developmental challenges.

Japanese Development Experience

Japan was the first non-Western country to successfully modernize its society and industrialize its economy. At the core of this process, which started more than 140 years ago, was the “adopt and adapt” concept by which a wide range of appropriate skills and knowledge have been imported from developed countries; these skills and knowledge have been adapted and/or improved using local skills, knowledge and initiatives. They finally became internalized in Japanese society to suit its local needs and conditions.

From engineering technology to production management methods, most of the know-how that has enabled Japan to become what it is today has emanated from this “adoption and adaptation” process, which, of course, has been accompanied by countless failures and errors behind the success stories. We presume that such experiences, both successful and unsuccessful, will be useful to our partners who are trying to address the challenges currently faced by developing countries.

However, it is rather challenging to share with our partners this whole body of Japan’s developmental experience. This difficulty has to do, in part, with the challenge of explaining a body of “tacit knowledge,” a type of knowledge that cannot fully be expressed in words or numbers. Adding to this difficulty are the social and cultural systems of Japan that vastly differ from those of other Western industrialized countries, and hence still remain unfamiliar to many partner countries. Simply stated, coming to Japan might be one way of overcoming such a cultural gap.

JICA, therefore, would like to invite as many leaders of partner countries as possible to come and visit us, to mingle with the Japanese people, and witness the advantages as well as the disadvantages of Japanese systems, so that integration of their findings might help them reach their developmental objectives.
