The undersigned is directed to state that in the background of the pivotal role being played by the Indian Civil Services in the overall development of the country, it has been observed that in the absence of a regular interaction among different wings of civil services, the officers remain confined to the domains of their respective services. Concept Paper on Inter Service Workshop

The Civil Service has long been regarded as the 'steel frame' of administration in India. The responsibility of the civil services is running the administration of India effectively and efficiently. It is believed that the administration of a vast and diverse country like India requires efficient management of its natural, economic and human resources. The country is managed through a number of Government Ministries/ Departments, primarily the All India Services and the Central Civil Services, in accordance with the policy directions given by the ministries. The Civil Service in India, with its national character, has been a strong binding force to a Union of States. This institution has been instrumental in the overall socio-economic development of the country. Apart from other reasons its importance arises from pan-India presence, strong binding character, leadership at different levels, administrative and managerial capacities of different services, effective policy making in different institutions and effective coordination between the different institutions of governance. There are certain governmental measures through which the much needed coordination between the different institutions of governance is introduced. The Foundation Course is one such course for a period of around 100 days, which introduces the young civil servants to the various avenues of governance, as well as serves as launching pad for inter-service camaraderie. Besides, deputations and empanelment at certain higher echelons of civil services provide opportunities for inter institutional interactions. Apart from this, there is no institutional mechanism by which officers at senior levels cutting across different services can come together and interact on a regular basis. It has been observed and felt that in absence of such a mechanism the officers remain confined to the narrow domains of their respective services, thereby defeating the very purpose for having such an extensive civil service in the country.

Annual workshop of the officers who have put in some years in the service (at least 12 to 14 years) and at the same time who still have a long career ahead will be a good initiative to begin with. It is believed that sharing of experiences of respective services, best practices adopted in policy, procedures and delivery mechanisms and the excellent work done by the officers of different departments and other sectors, discussions on common problems affecting different services and having a brainstorming on the role and future of civil services in this rapidly changing scenario will go a long way in strengthening the civil services in India and in turn having a strong and vibrant administrative framework in India.

Thus, it is proposed that annually, atleast one Group A Officer of 12 to 14 years of experience should be nominated by Central Services and All India Services for a workshop of Civil Servants in India at different Academies of Central Services and All India Services. The minimum duration of such an event should be a week with about 50 participants. Training cost may be borne by the respective Cadre Controlling Authorities and reimbursed to the host Academy. Training cost may be fixed on similar rates as fixed by LBSNAA, Mussoorie.

The aim of such workshop will be to share experiences of respective services, best practices adopted in policy, procedures and delivery mechanisms and the outstanding work done by the officers of different departments and other sectors, discussions on common problems affecting civil services and having a brainstorming session/s on the role and future of civil services in this rapidly changing scenario in the globalised environment. A comprehensive 'Way Forward' may also be worked out.
