Phases in Japan: From May 11, 2011 to July 16, 2011

This information pertains to one of the Training and Dialogue Programs of the Japan International Cooperation Agency (JICA), which shall be implemented as part of the Official Development Assistance of the Government of Japan based on bilateral agreement between both Governments.

Preface

The Group Training Course in Application of information management and related ICT for official statistics will be conducted jointly by the Government of Japan [through the Japan International Cooperation Agency (JICA)*] and the United Nations Statistical Institute for Asia and the Pacific (SIAP) with a view of strengthening the capability of producing statistics for social and economic progress in developing countries.

* The Japanese Government extends official development assistance (ODA) to developing countries to support their self-help efforts that will lead to economic progress and a better life for the citizens of those countries. Since its foundation in 1974, the Japan International Cooperation Agency (JICA) has implemented Japan's technical cooperation under the ODA program. In October 2003, JICA was transformed into an "Independent Administrative Institution", a new form of governmental agency. Important related changes include closer attention to grassroots level cooperation, peace-building, cost performance, faster decision-making, and accountability. JICA continues to be one of the official agencies responsible for implementing ODA programs, in particular technical cooperation, on behalf of the Government of Japan. JICA's programs include Technical Cooperation Projects, Dispatch of Technical Cooperation Experts, Technical Training of Overseas Participants, Development Studies, Dispatch of Japanese Volunteers, Disaster Relief and Grant Aid, etc.

United Nations Statistical Institute for Asia and the Pacific (SIAP) was established in Tokyo in 1970 by twenty countries in Asia and the Pacific and the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP). It has been an international center to bring about regional cooperation in training government statisticians from developing countries of the region. SIAP was accorded the legal status of a subsidiary body of the United Nations Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific (ESCAP) as of April 1, 1995. As the host country, the Government of Japan extends cooperation to the Institute through the Ministry of Internal Affairs and Communications (MIC) as the cooperation agency.

I. Concept

Background

Developing countries in the ESCAP and other regions today need accurate, timely and reliable statistical data in order to monitor and achieve their development goals, in particular the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs). There is variety of ICT related tools applicable to those purposes and the technologies have been advancing very rapidly. To go along with the advancement and to supply statistical products efficiently and effectively, national statistical offices and other government agencies make up national statistical system as well as official statisticians must constantly maintain their knowledge and skills updated.

The training course is organized to meet the above needs of developing countries. To make the course more effective, the course curriculum is designed as training for trainers with its multiplier effects in scope.

For what?

This program aims to improve knowledge and skills for the timely processing of census and survey data and improving the quality and management practices of statistical databases for effective use and dissemination .

For whom?

This program is offered to statisticians or computer specialists in national statistical offices and other government agencies make up national statistical system who are involved in the use of ICT in their statistical works and are expected to serve as core officials to develop ICT based government statistical system.

How?

Participants shall master knowledge and skills in applying ICT related tools into statistical works including compilation of MDG indicators, as well as in using statistical software like CPro, MS ACCESS, DevInfo, IHSN and STATA. Under the project base learning programme, they shall undertake, in forming small groups, a project work where they apply their learned ICT skills to data processing and analysis. They shall also develop their action plans for further disseminating gained knowledge and skills into their offices after return to their respective countries.

JICA and Capacity Development

The key concept underpinning JICA operations since its establishment in 1974 has been the conviction that “capacity development” is central to the socioeconomic development of any country, regardless of the specific operational scheme one may be undertaking, i.e. expert assignments, development projects, development study projects, training programs, JOCV programs, etc.

Within this wide range of programs, Training Programs have long occupied an important place in JICA operations. Conducted in Japan, they provide partner countries with opportunities to acquire practical knowledge accumulated in Japanese society. Participants dispatched by partner countries might find useful knowledge and re-create their own knowledge for enhancement of their own capacity or that of the organization and society to which they belong.

About 460 pre-organized programs cover a wide range of professional fields, ranging from education, health, infrastructure, energy, trade and finance, to agriculture, rural development, gender mainstreaming, and environmental protection. A variety of programs are being customized to address the specific needs of different target organizations, such as policy-making organizations, service provision organizations, as well as research and academic institutions. Some programs are organized to target a certain group of countries with similar developmental challenges.

Japanese Development Experience

Japan was the first non-Western country to successfully modernize its society and industrialize its economy. At the core of this process, which started more than 140 years ago, was the “adopt and adapt” concept by which a wide range of appropriate skills and knowledge have been imported from developed countries; these skills and knowledge have been adapted and/or improved using local skills, knowledge and initiatives. They finally became internalized in Japanese society to suit its local needs and conditions.

From engineering technology to production management methods, most of the know-how that has enabled Japan to become what it is today has emanated from this “adoption and adaptation” process, which, of course, has been accompanied by countless failures and errors behind the success stories. We presume that such experiences, both successful and unsuccessful, will be useful to our partners who are trying to address the challenges currently faced by developing countries.

However, it is rather challenging to share with our partners this whole body of Japan’s developmental experience. This difficulty has to do, in part, with the challenge of explaining a body of “tacit knowledge,” a type of knowledge that cannot fully be expressed in words or numbers. Adding to this difficulty are the social and cultural systems of Japan that vastly differ from those of other Western industrialized countries, and hence still remain unfamiliar to many partner countries. Simply stated, coming to Japan might be one way of overcoming such a cultural gap.

JICA, therefore, would like to invite as many leaders of partner countries as possible to come and visit us, to mingle with the Japanese people, and witness the advantages as well as the disadvantages of Japanese systems, so that integration of their findings might help them reach their developmental objectives.
