This information pertains to one of the Training and Dialogue Programs of the Japan International Cooperation Agency (JICA), which shall be implemented as part of the Official Development Assistance of the Government of Japan based on bilateral agreement between both Governments.

I. Concept

Background

Making necessary public policy for national / regional development and its implementation are the role of the national / local government. However, especially in the developing countries, those are not necessarily planned and/or performed efficiently due to the vulnerability of regal / implementation system and public finance.

After World War , Japan has developed national land with rapid growth of economy, and brought themselves out of poverty.

In late years, community based regional development and environmentally friendly development approach has been initiated in our country.

Through the introduction of these experiences in Japan, with the aim of improving the ability of human resources in planning and implementing national / regional development policy, the predecessor group training course "National Development" has been established in 1980. Since then, for nearly 30 years, lots of knowledge and skills related to national / regional development policy has been transferred to the participants in this training program.

In the year 2000, the contents of the program were reviewed, and as a result of the review, some practices such as regional development case study were added in order to meet the needs of developing countries.

For what?

This program is designed to develop the ability of government officials engaged in planning or implementation of national/regional development projects/policies

For whom?

This program is offered to government officials currently engaged in planning or implementation of national / regional development projects / policies.

How?

Participants shall have opportunities in Japan to get in touch with the policies, strategies and systems as well as best practices in the field of national and regional development planning and projects, and to know the effective management systems of local and regional development.

Participants will also formulate an action plan describing how the national and regional development systems of home countries can be improved, putting the knowledge and ideas acquired and discussed in Japan among others into their on-going activities.

For Your Reference

JICA and Capacity Development

The key concept underpinning JICA operations since its establishment in 1974 has been the conviction that "capacity development" is central to the socioeconomic development of any country, regardless of the specific operational scheme one may be undertaking, i.e. expert assignments, development projects, development study projects, training programs, JOCV programs, etc.

Within this wide range of programs, Training Programs have long occupied an important place in JICA operations. Conducted in Japan, they provide partner countries with opportunities to acquire practical knowledge accumulated in Japanese society. Participants dispatched by partner countries might find useful knowledge and re-create their own knowledge for enhancement of their own capacity or that of the organization and society to which they belong.

About 460 pre-organized programs cover a wide range of professional fields, ranging from education, health, infrastructure, energy, trade and finance, to agriculture, rural development, gender mainstreaming, and environmental protection. A variety of programs and are being customized to address the specific needs of different target organizations, such as policy-making organizations, service provision organizations, as well as research and academic institutions. Some programs are organized to target a certain group of countries with similar developmental challenges.

Japanese Development Experience

Japan was the first non-Western country to successfully modernize its society and industrialize its economy. At the core of this process, which started more than 140 years ago, was the "adopt and adapt" concept by which a wide range of appropriate skills and knowledge have been imported from developed countries; these skills and knowledge have been adapted and/or improved using local skills, knowledge and initiatives. They finally became internalized in Japanese society to suit its local needs and conditions.

From engineering technology to production management methods, most of the know-how that has enabled Japan to become what it is today has emanated from this "adoption and adaptation" process, which, of course, has been accompanied by countless failures and errors behind the success stories. We presume that such experiences, both successful and unsuccessful, will be useful to our partners who are trying to address the challenges currently faced by developing countries.

However, it is rather challenging to share with our partners this whole body of Japan's developmental experience. This difficulty has to do, in part, with the challenge of explaining a body of "tacit knowledge," a type of knowledge that cannot fully be expressed in words or numbers. Adding to this difficulty are the social and cultural systems of Japan that vastly differ from those of other Western industrialized countries, and hence still remain unfamiliar to many partner countries. Simply stated, coming to Japan might be one way of overcoming such a cultural gap.

JICA, therefore, would like to invite as many leaders of partner countries as possible to come and visit us, to mingle with the Japanese people, and witness the advantages as well as the disadvantages of Japanese systems, so that integration of their findings might help them reach their developmental objectives.
