Couse Period in Japan: Under Planning

This information pertains to one of the JICA Knowledge Co-Creation Programs (Group & Region Focus) of the Japan International Cooperation Agency (JICA) implemented as part of the Official Development Assistance of the Government of Japan based on bilateral agreement between both Governments.

JICA Knowledge Co-Creation Program (KCCP)

The Japanese Cabinet released the Development Cooperation Charter in February 2015, stated that “In its development cooperation, Japan has maintained the spirit of jointly creating things that suit partner countries while respecting ownership, intentions and intrinsic characteristics of the country concerned based on a field-oriented approach through dialogue and collaboration. It has also maintained the approach of building reciprocal relationships with developing countries in which both sides learn from each other and grow and develop together.” We believe that this ‘Knowledge Co-Creation Program’ will serve as a foundation of mutual learning process.

I. Concept

Background

The road network has an essential role to build a foundation for improving our daily life and economic activities: road network allows easier access to jobs, healthcare and education as well as it connects goods and services to markets. The road network development in urban area, for example, can help people reduce time in moving from one place to another, increase the safety of the residence and help government provide public service efficiently.

Although the road network development is crucial to improve our urban life, rapid urbanization and motorization in recent years have caused more traffic congestion, traffic accidents and environmental problems. They are attributed to various factors such as rapid population increase, inadequate and poor road infrastructure, urban structure system and rapid increase of vehicles as well as lack of comprehensive plan for city development. Knowledge and technologies based on practical experience are essential to promote further development of urban road network.

This program is designed for the engineering officials responsible for development of urban road network. In this program, participants will obtain practical knowledge on how to cope with the problems through lecturers via online and observations in Japan. Knowledge and techniques acquired during the program shall be incorporated and reflected in Action Plans for promoting further development of urban road network in the participants' countries.

For what?

The aim of this program is to improve the capacity for effective and efficient urban road development through Japanese experience such as engineering techniques, measures of traffic congestion relief, road safety and surrounding environment protection.

For whom?

This program is designed for engineering officers in charge of urban road development.

How?

Participants will obtain new knowledge and ideas of urban road development through lecturers and site visit. Upon completion of the program, participants will prepare an Action Plan describing what the participants will do after they go back to home country with the knowledge and ideas acquired in Japan.

Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs)

For Your Reference

JICA and Capacity Development

Technical cooperation is people-to-people cooperation that supports partner (developing) countries in enhancing their comprehensive capacities to address development challenges by their own efforts. Instead of applying Japanese technology per se to developing countries, JICA's technical cooperation provides solutions that best fit their needs by working with people living there. In the process, consideration is given to factors such as their regional characteristics, historical background, and languages. JICA does not limit its technical cooperation to human resources development; it offers multi-tiered assistance that also involves organizational strengthening, policy formulation, and institution building.

Implementation methods of JICA's technical cooperation can be divided into two approaches. One is overseas cooperation by dispatching experts and volunteers in various development sectors to developing countries; the other is domestic cooperation by inviting participants from developing countries to Japan. The latter method is the Knowledge Co-Creation Program, formerly called a Training Program, and it is one of the core programs carried out in Japan. By inviting officials from developing countries and with cooperation from domestic partners, the Knowledge Co-Creation Program provides technical knowledge and practical solutions for development issues in participating countries.

The Knowledge Co-Creation Program (Group & Region Focus) has long occupied an important place in JICA operations. About 400 pre-organized programs cover a wide range of professional fields, ranging from education, health, infrastructure, energy, trade and finance, to agriculture, rural development, gender mainstreaming, and environmental protection. A variety of programs is being customized by the different target organizations to address the specific needs, such as policy-making organizations, service provision organizations, as well as research and academic institutions. Some programs are organized to target a certain group of countries with similar developmental challenges.

Japanese Development Experience

Japan, as the first non-Western nation to become a developed country, built itself into a country that is free, peaceful, prosperous and democratic while preserving the tradition. Japan will serve as one of the best examples for our partner countries to follow in their own development.

From engineering technology to production management methods, most of the know-how that has enabled Japan to become what it is today has emanated, of course, has been accompanied by countless failures and errors behind the success stories.

Through Japan's progressive adaptation and application of systems, methods and technologies from the West in a way that is suited to its own circumstances, Japan has developed a storehouse of knowledge not found elsewhere from unique systems of organization, administration and personnel management to such social systems as the livelihood improvement approach and governmental organization. It is not easy to apply such experiences to developing countries where the circumstances differ, but the experiences can provide ideas and clues useful when devising measures to solve problems in developing countries.

JICA, therefore, would like to invite as many leaders of partner countries as possible to come and visit us, to mingle with the Japanese people, and witness the advantages as well as the disadvantages of Japanese systems, so that integration of their findings might help them reach their developmental objectives.
