Sub: Dissemination of information about online Training Program being conducted by The Asian Development Bank Institute (ADBI)

Sir,

I am directed to refer to the subject mentioned above and to say that the Asian Development Bank Institute (ADBI) was established in Tokyo as a subsidiary body of the Asian Development Bank (ADB) to contribute to the development of the Asian and Pacific region by identifying effective development strategies and improving the capacity for sound development management of the agencies and organizations in the Developing Member Countries (DMCs) of the ADB. The Statute establishing the ADBI came into force in Oct 1996.

2. One of the key functions of ADBI is to work on matters of development policy and management, capacity building and good governance. ADBI organizes and conducts training programs, seminars, conferences and lectures in development policy for middle to top level policymakers and officials of public, private and other entities engaged in development work in the DMCs of ADB. ADBI also conducts research on development issues and disseminates the results of research, training, seminars and conferences. for detailed information refer the website of ADBI: [www.adb.org/adbi]

3. ADBI provides capacity building and training to mid and senior level officials from ADB developing member countries to enhance awareness on the region's important development issues, introduce appropriate policy proposals to address them, and build consensus among policy makers and stakeholders on key priority areas. Some of the courses of ADBI are available online, on completion of which Training Certificates are issued by ADBI. Some of the Latest Courses available online are as follows:

- (i) The Role of Central Banks and Financial Supervisory Authorities in Governing Sustainable Finance
- (ii) Climate Change and Sovereign Risk
